

Eastern Townships

On a beautiful Saturday afternoon in April, 50 alumni and friends from the Eastern Townships gathered for the first ever family sugaring-off. The afternoon began with a wonderful brunch, which saw more food than anyone could eat. Thanks to Eddie Blake and his beautiful Arabian horses, the kids and their families were treated to a wagon ride around the countryside. Following the wagon rides, everyone received their fill of sugar from the freshly boiled taffy on snow prepared by our hosts, Yvon and France Rodrigue, owners of the sugar shack L'Erabliere du Coin.

Everyone had a great time and is looking forward to returning next year. Special Thanks to KGB's Tim Brink, who played the guitar during the afternoon.

Eastern Townships alumni and their families enjoyed the first ever family sugaring-off last April.

Halifax

A little drizzle did not prevent Maritimers from Nova Scotia from attending the alumni event on the 18th of May at the Old Triangle Irish Alehouse in downtown Halifax. The group, which enjoyed their own private seating on an upper level of the bar, enjoyed ale and hors d'oeuvres. This event was the first in a long time in Halifax; it is hoped that a similar event can be planned in the near future. Long-range plans see the Halifax Branch hosting a major golf tournament early in 2002 for the entire Maritime Bishop's contingency. Thanks to all alumni and friends (not shown in picture) who attended, and especially to Gayle and Jamie Saunders for their efforts in organizing the event.

Saint John

On May 18th, alumni from Saint John, NB met at the popular O'Leary's Irish Pub to relive fond memories of their time spent at Bishop's. Following O'Leary's, the group ventured up the street to Taco Pica, one of Saint John's finest restaurants, for a fabulous dinner. Not only was the food outstanding but the group was also treated to elegant live music during dinner. Although few in numbers, a great time was had by all. Those in attendance decided that more regular events will be organized and a goal will be to increase attendance. Special thanks to Tara Dick, Branch President, for her help in organizing the event.

Toronto

Jeff Cannon Golf 2001

This year's 2nd Annual Toronto Jeff Cannon Memorial Golf Tournament was played on June 16th at the beautiful Hunters' Glen Golf Club in Kleinburg. For the 122 golfers who participated in the event, the scores were low and the greens were in perfect shape. Thanks to all who participated, the tournament was able to raise over $6,200 for the Jeff Cannon Memorial Fund. Special thanks to Kirsten Harrett '83 of Deer Park Lodge and David Colfer '90 of Langostina Cookware for their generous prize donations and Pat Shiels '89 for his help in organizing the tournament. We look forward to returning in 2002 to the Hunters' Glen Golf Club for the 3rd Annual Tournament with a capacity crowd.

Bishop's University Foundation: Taking care of your donations

S.R. McMorran '60
Chairman, Bishop's
University Foundation

(When you donate to Bishop's, your gift is entrusted to our Foundation. Bud McMorran, Chairman, explains how the Foundation works to make sure Bishop's receives the greatest benefit from your money.)

Mission

The Bishop's University Foundation raises and manages funds to help advance the University's goals. The Foundation recognizes that charitable donations must supplement government grants to fulfil these goals and maintain Bishop's emphasis on "excellence in teaching enriched by scholarship and research."

Annual Giving

When you make a gift to Bishop's, the Foundation ensures that it is directed to the fund you wish. Undesignated gifts are allocated to the University's highest priority which, at this time, is financial assistance and reward for students.

Our Endowment

Because endowments provide Bishop's with a reliable source of income every year, the Foundation aims to build its endowment. We grow the endowment largely through donations to trust funds, which are capitalized, and effective investment and spending policies. In 2000, the Foundation managed an endowment with a market value of about $17.5 million.

In 1995, $3 million in trusts were restricted to student support; the amount is now $8.4 million and yet still a far cry from the University's needs. Other trust fund priorities include research, guest speakers, the library.

Contributions to Bishop's

Since 1995 the amount contributed by the Foundation to Bishop's from annual giving and trust income has almost doubled. Thanks also to the Partners in Learning Campaign, yearly contributions from the Foundation have been over one million for years.

Scholarships

Bishop's is proud of the academic achievements of our students. Our incoming class last year saw 21.9% on scholarship, and the number of students who retain or renew their scholarships in upper years has also increased.

There is a price for success, however. The cost of our scholarship programme has tripled in the past three years, bringing annual investment in students to $1,000,000. Our priority for the Foundation is to gain additional trust funds restricted to student support. Where will we find donors to help our students? From people like you.

How you can give to Bishop's and save taxes:

Federal Tax Credits

- For your first $200 in donations — tax credit of 17%
- Additional donations — tax credit of 29%

Quebec Tax Credits

- For your first $2,000 in donations — tax credit of 21%
- Additional donations — tax credit of 25%

Combined tax credits: about 52%

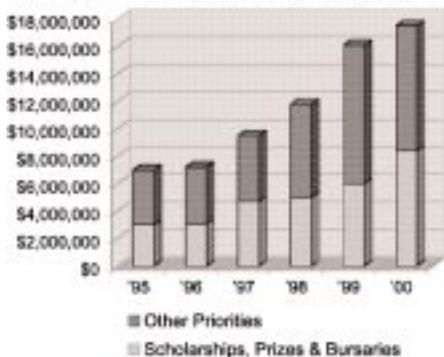

Tax Consequences

- Donations are tax deductible to the extent of 75% of net income in the year of donation. Excess amounts may be carried forward for up to five years.
- Estate bequests are deductible to the extent of 100% of net income in the year of death, and may be carried back to the extent of 100% of net income in the preceding year.

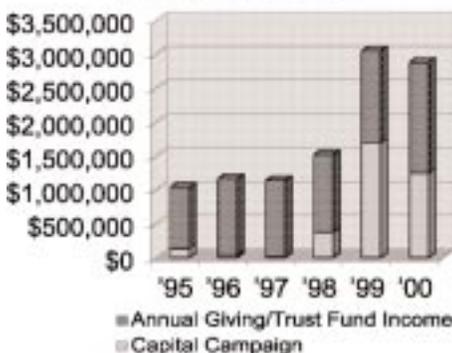

Beneficial Tax Changes

- Capital gains inclusion rate lowered on gifts of listed securities to fi of regular capital gains tax (to 25% from 50%).
- Capital gains inclusion rate lowered on gifts of employee stock options.

Foundation Contributions to the University

Please make Bishop's foremost in your charitable plans.

Three long-serving members of faculty retire

Karl Kuepper

Dr. Karl J. Kuepper came to Bishop's in 1979 from the University of New Brunswick. He brought to Bishop's his passion for linguistics, literature, teaching, and administration; and for over 20 years he has been an integral part of life at this university.

Karl was Dean of Faculty from 1979-87 and showed in that office his qualities of collegiality, toughness and resilience. In spite of the difficulties inherent in that position, he earned the enduring respect and admiration of those who worked with him. In 1987 he joined the German Department, where he assisted in the development of programmes in the areas of German and, latterly, Modern Languages.

Over the years, Karl did much to enhance the national and international profile of our university. He always maintained his connections with his native Germany, and he was active in many professional associations. He was a long-standing member of the Canadian Association of University Teachers of German, serving as president from 1986-88. He was also active in the World University Service of Canada, the Canadian Federation for the Humanities, and the International Association of Teachers of German. Karl was particularly interested in establishing exchange opportunities, and Bishop's now sees a regular influx of visiting German students, thanks in large measure to his efforts.

Karl's accomplishments as a teacher were also substantial. His exemplary skills in the classroom were recognized in 1995 when he received the William and Nancy Turner Award for Teaching.

In terms of research, Karl's interests have been eclectic. His publications have encompassed diverse subjects — from symbolism in Kafka to speech-act theory in second language teaching; from problems in translation to the evolution from oral to written discourse in medieval town documents. His passion for languages has also been reflected in his many conference presentations and teacher training seminars, and in his tireless efforts to enhance language teaching at Bishop's.

These broad interests came as a natural extension of Karl's early background in German and English Philology (Cologne and Münster), Education (Cologne) and American literature and history (Amherst College). Not surprising, then, that his conversations frequently had the air of the roller coaster about them, careening from the banal to the comic to the arcane to the sublime in the space of a few phrases. Consonant shifts in Old High German, idiomatic variations in Quebec French, phraseology in Frost's poetry, the irony manifested in Death of a Salesman and in the latest episode of Seinfeld — all became objects of lively and intense speculation.

Karl was, above all, the embodiment of collegiality. With Karl, one was struck by the sense that a university is a gathering place for people working for a common cause; a place where grammar, rhetoric, and logic interact; a place where discourse will prevail — where one sits among peers and argues, advocates, cajoles, and persuades things from abstraction into application.

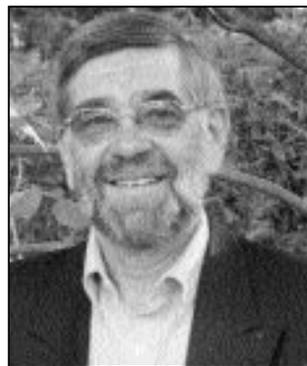

Karl will long remain an inspiration to his colleagues in Humanities. Few have done more to preserve the best aspects of Bishop's liberal arts tradition. In this regard, it is especially fitting that he was honoured with the status of Emeritus Professor at the June 2001 Convocation.

I join Karl's colleagues in wishing him a long and happy retirement.

Stephen Sheeran
Chair, Department of Modern Languages

Garry Retzleff

Garry Retzleff may be retiring, but he's certainly not retiring; no, he's outgoing, energetic, dynamic. His enthusiasm explains why Garry has always been a very popular teacher. He taught a wide variety of courses: an Eighteenth-Century Literature specialist who, in recent years, undertook the teaching of Commonwealth — or perhaps I should use the politically correct "Postcolonial" — with a genuine passion. His Caribbean Literature last term was one of our most successful courses and inspired the immensely enjoyable Caribbean Party his wife, Marjorie, and he so generously hosted for English students.

In his earlier years here, Garry taught Literary Criticism and "The Bible and Literature," with a generous dollop of Northrop Frye in both. He also taught a course on 17th, 18th, and 19th century Architecture in the early days of the Fine Arts Department; and he was, in fact, a major influence in the establishing of this department.

Garry has always given his all for the good of the English Department. He has, for example, been willing to fill in when someone is sick; he offered to do so for me on one occasion (fortunately it did not prove necessary), and he did so when someone became ill towards the end of the last fall term, even though he was on sabbatical at the time. He has often said that, in his view, the well-being of our students is of the utmost importance. In this regard, too, he has maintained an open door policy and is always available. This openness also applies to his house; not only has it been the site of many an enjoyable gathering, but Marjorie and he have also always made new members of faculty very welcome there.

Garry served two terms as Dean of Humanities (I think he'd regard this as the appropriate phrasing). To this position he brought his characteristic time and energy. The only regret the English Department, and its students, had about this was that it took Garry away from the classroom too much of the time.

In addition to these achievements, Garry was involved in many other activities. His willingness to ask people to give to the University's capital campaigns immediately comes to mind; and his open-door policy came into play here too, as he and Marjorie hosted "donor" receptions at their home. Garry was also very actively involved in St. Mark's Chapel, and in Anglicanism in general; one of the high points of his time at Bishop's, he claims, was meeting Archbishop Tutu when he came to Bishop's to receive an honorary degree. He was active in arranging programmes for Centennial Theatre and the Art Gallery, and served on the boards of Bishop's College School and The Piggery.

Garry has been able to combine business and pleasure: he not only owns a villa in Turkey, but has also, in recent years, been engaged in writing a book on Early Christian sites in Turkey. His research interests reflect his peripatetic leanings, with work on the Elgin Marbles and eighteenth-century British travel narratives, for example. Now Marjorie and he will be able to devote more time to this wanderlust.

Garry, we all wish Marjorie and you a very well-deserved and enjoyable retirement.

David Sorensen

David Sorensen came to the Bishop's Fine Arts faculty in 1981 and held a permanent half-time position in studio art from 1983 until his retirement last fall. David was truly a teacher and a practicing artist. He succeeded in reconciling the local and private with the cosmopolitan and public. Some of my most vivid memories of him as a colleague are rural: visions of his austere barn cum studio in the countryside near Ayer's Cliff — a cavernous white room with a lonely wood-burning stove at its center. But there are more worldly and cosmopolitan memories as well, for David was involved in the art centres of Montreal, Toronto, Vancouver, New York, and Tokyo. He has exhibited and sold works around the globe, from New Orleans to Manila, Hong Kong and Mexico City.

Patience is one of David's great virtues, an odd one in someone juggling so many balls at once. While raising a family, building and continuously renovating their home, and maintaining an international exhibition schedule, he nonetheless dedicated himself to the development and promotion of the Bishop's Fine Arts Department and Art Gallery. He always had time for students and for hosting other artists and professors of art, making possible the sharing of their expertise with the Bishop's community. David went out into the art world and brought the art world to Bishop's, while still finding time to create serene and meditative abstract artworks in his studio.

Described as "a great source of inspiration" by a colleague in the studio programme, he encouraged students and colleagues alike to break new ground and embark on fresh and ambitious projects. Some were realized, others only briefly, and a few remained in the dream stage. Among the dreams that David and others worked long hours to realize was the erection of the Molson Fine Arts Building with a large painting studio, allowing students to gain experience in working on a monumental scale. He persevered in the creation of an art gallery at Bishop's, from its early days as a barely funded, closet-sized space in the student centre to the present spacious, custom-built facility next to Centennial Theatre. Developing an exchange programme with the University of Guadalajara was a dream that materialized only briefly, but long enough for several groups of Bishop's students to have the unique experience of art and language study in Mexico. Projects like these have affected our life and its quality, even when they were not fully realized. An artist without dreams, without "unrealizable" ideas, is perhaps not an artist.

To say David has retired would be grossly inaccurate. Since leaving Bishop's he has completed a group of seven paintings commissioned from New Jersey and participated in a major exhibition in Guadalajara sponsored by the Canadian embassy. In July David's work was on exhibit at the Centre d'Arts Orford de Magog. A major ten-year retrospective of his work opened July 1 in Valcourt at the Yvonne L. Bombardier Foundation and will run until October 1. His prophetically entitled piece, L'Arc Déplacé, originally designed for the lobby of Salle Maurice O'Bready at the Université de Sherbrooke, has been displaced, all 1600 pounds of it, and will be exhibited with 30 other works. To keep abreast of David's manifold activity, visit his website (www.geocities.com/sorensendavid/fson.html), or write him at dsoren37@hotmail.com. Several of his pieces can be seen on campus, among them a large metal sculpture in the open air between the Theatre and the Fine Arts building.

We will miss David and his wife Bella, who has helped us all with great cheer and generosity, continually supporting the endeavors of her husband and the Fine Arts Department at Bishop's. We wish them well.

Faculty Profile

Professor Denise Fortier of the Williams School of Business and Economics is the 2001 recipient of The William and Nancy Turner Award for Teaching.

Professor Fortier graduated from Bishop's University in 1987 with a BBA in Marketing and completed her Master's degree in Speech Communication at California State University Northridge in 1992. Professor Fortier joined Bishop's faculty in 1995, bringing with her several years of industry and teaching experience as an authority in the field of communication.

Her students have benefitted greatly from her knowledge and experience. They describe her lectures as "unique," "insightful" and "daring" in that they unleash the creativity buried in them and motivate them to learn. Her cheery disposition and open-mindedness are able to turn the most timid into active class participants, unreservedly voicing their opinions on current events. They marvel at her mastery of three disciplines: Marketing, Management and Human Resources, all of which she has taught here at Bishop's. They further appreciate her fairness and describe her as an excellent role model as an individual and as a Bishop's graduate.

Professor Fortier's commitment to her students extends beyond the classroom. When not competing herself in international wheelchair races, she is often seen cheering her students on at sporting events and is a regular at student-faculty activities. Her office door always remains open for individual help in coursework and for consultation on employment matters. To show their appreciation for her efforts, her students regularly offer to take her assistance dog, Romano, for campus walks and sneak him dog treats on their way to class.

Professor Fortier's students, or her fans, as they call themselves, have nominated her for the teaching award in appreciation of her energy, enthusiasm and commitment to teaching.

Reconnect over the Net

Add your name to Bishop's e-mail directory

Lost touch with a Bishop's classmate, roommate, teammate, professor? When you register with Bishop's e-mail directory, your name is added to the growing list of alumni who enjoy keeping in touch with old friends over the net.

Our e-mail directory is free for Bishop's graduates. You can search the directory for a special friend or get a listing of all members of a particular class who have registered on our directory.

Only alumni and friends can access the directory, and there is even a private mail feature to hide your e-mail address from view if you wish. We'll keep you up to date on what's happening for Bishop's alumni and friends — members of the directory will receive news of upcoming events in their region.
